MARKET COMMENTARY

Major sharemarkets started the month of January off on a solid footing, rising as a phase one US-China trade deal was signed. This was quickly reversed for most markets though in late January as news of the spread of the coronavirus originating in China shook investors. One should not overlook the human impact of the virus on those affected, including its impact on family and friends of those impacted. At the time of writing in early February, sharemarkets had partially rebounded though remained volatile, as fears eased, but were not erased, regarding the likely extent of the impact of the virus on affected companies and the global economy.

For the month of January, global shares, as measured by the MSCI All Country World Index in local currency terms, fell -1.2%, dragged down by Emerging Markets which dropped -3.3%. Emerging market returns were particularly affected by the falls in the Chinese sharemarket (-5.1%) as the coronavirus spread. All major sharemarkets fell in local currency terms with Asia ex Japan (-3.9%) and the UK (-3.4%) seeing the biggest falls. On a sector basis globally (in USD), Energy (-9.1%) and Materials (-5.5%) fell the most as there was reduced demand concerns again stemming from the coronavirus. In a risk off month for equity markets generally it was no surprise that the defensive Utilities (+5.7%) and IT (+3.4%) sectors found the bid in the market.

The local Australian sharemarket reversed last month's relative underperformance versus global sharemarkets this month and then some, topping the table of market gains, up 5.0% for the S&P/ASX200 on a total return basis. This was in stark contrast to the falls seen on global markets.

Large caps dominated the month with the Small Ords underperforming by -1.6%, a trend that's also been seen over the last year. Sector wise over the month for the ASX200, all 11 sectors gained. In what further highlights the disparity between the Australian and overseas sharemarkets over the month, Utilities, the best performer globally was the worst in Australia (+0.6%). The far and away leaders in Australia were the Health Care (+12.0%) and IT (+11.1%) sectors, creating a somewhat rare feat of two sectors being up in double figures during a month.

PORTFOLIO COMMENTARY

During January the Ophir High Conviction Fund's investment portfolio returned +5.5% for the month after fees, outperforming its benchmark by +1.5%. Since inception, the Fund's investment portfolio has returned +20.7% per annum after fees, outperforming its benchmark by 8.3% per annum.

During January the Ophir High Conviction Fund's ASX listing provided a total return of 9.2% for the month.

In key stock news for the Fund, Afterpay (ASX:APT) (31.7%), NextDC (ASX: NXT) (15.4%), and Resmed (ASX:RMD) (14.4%) were three of the strongest performers.

Afterpay rose from around $30 to near $39 by month end in January, moving past the $10bil market cap level. During the month the Buy Now, Pay Later operator disclosed that it has been granted a California finance lender's licence by the Department of Business and Oversight in the US in November last year to facilitate future potential expansion after a licence application for competitor Sezzle was recently denied.

NextDC registered a strong month rising past its highs of 2019 and pushing past the $7.50 level by month end. NextDC is Australia's largest independent data centre operator and collects about 90% of its revenue from leasing out its centres. We are attracted to its structural growth tailwind of enterprises moving more and more data to the cloud increasing demand for its centres over time.

Resmed benefitted from the sectoral updraft that Healthcare stocks received over the quarter as it ground higher over the month. Some of these gains were given back on the first trading day of February as the stock dropped from $25 to $23.90 on second quarter results that slightly disappointed the market. At writing it has since recovered this drop and is trading around all time highs.

In terms of detractors for the month, Webjet (ASX:WEB) (-9.8%), Cooper Energy (ASX:COE) -6.6% and Freedom Foods (ASX:FNP) -5.3% all bucked the trend of the Australian market and fell. Each suffered from concerns over coronavirus or other impacts. Webjet's relating to travel books, Cooper Energy relating to falls in energy prices and Freedom Foods relating to concerns of increased dairy costs post bushfires.

We see each of these impacts being short term and not materially impacting our investment thesis for these companies. That said we are keeping a watchful eye on how the market is impounding current information about the impact of the virus on these businesses to determine whether we believe they may be oversold due to irrational fears and warrant further buying, or whether sufficient uncertainty exists that warrants a wait and see approach.
