About The Fund

The Ophir Global High Conviction Fund (the Fund) seeks to provide investors with concentrated exposure to high quality small and mid-cap companies globally. Employing an extensive investment process that combines a rigorous company visitation schedule and fundamental bottom-up analysis, the Fund aims to identify businesses operating within structural growth sectors with the ability to deliver ongoing positive earnings revisions. With a bias toward cash generative businesses with sound balance sheets and high quality management teams, the Fund seeks to identify those opportunities early in a Company's investment life cycle, when the listed equity is typically under-researched and under-valued by the broader investment market. This fund is appropriate for investors with "High to Very High" risk and return profiles. A suitable investor for this fund is prepared to accept high to very high risk in the pursuit of capital growth with a medium to long investment timeframe. Investors should refer to the Target Market Determination (TMD) for further information.

Market Commentary

Global uncertainty and geopolitical tensions, continue to rock financial markets. The Trump Administration initiated a 90-day pause for countries that did not impose retaliatory measures on the US, post “Liberation Day”. Markets rebounded on the news, regaining losses incurred the week prior. However, fears of a US recession still loom over the economy, with investors piling into Japanese yen and gold, (gold reaching all time high of $3,500 per troy ounce) as safe haven assets. Meanwhile confidence in US dollar dwindles.

Companies have not been affected in equal measure. Automakers such as General Motors and Stellantis have pulled their profit guidance amid the uncertainty, while the investment banks (JPMorgan, Morgan Stanley, Goldman Sachs, Citigroup) reported higher revenues driven by opportunistic stock trading during higher market volatility.

In April, both the Russell 2000 Index and the S&P 500 fell -2.3% and -0.7%, respectively. Within small caps, growth outperformed value, as the Russell 2000 Growth Index fell -0.6% compared to a -4.0% drop for the Russell 2000 Value Index.

Similarly, large-cap growth outperformed value, with the S&P 500 Growth Index gaining +2.2%, while the S&P 500 Value Index lost -3.5%. Energy was the largest detractor within the S&P 500, posting a -13.6% loss, followed by Healthcare, -3.7%. Information Technology rebounded +1.6%. Within the Russell 2000 Index, Staples (+1.0%) and Utilities (+0.9%) were the best relative performers, while Real Estate (-6.2%) and Energy (-14.4%) were the worst relative detractors.

Globally, most European, and Asian equities also fell with the Euro Stoxx 50 down -1.0%, the FTSE 100 down -0.7% and the Hang Seng down -4.0%.

Portfolio Commentary

During April, the Ophir Global High Conviction Fund – Class A returned -0.6% (net of fees) versus the index which returned -1.7%. Since its inception in September 2020, the Fund has returned +11.4% p.a. (net of fees) while the index has returned +11.0% p.a.

The number of holdings remained stable at 36 and cash levels increased to 8.5%. In terms of currency movements, the AUD appreciated 2.5% against the USD.

One of the top contributors to performance during the month was a $9.0bn AUD pharmaceutical company based in the US. The company's share price rallied +19.9% over the month after an FDA approval for an enhancement of its processes. It is one of the defensive growth names in the portfolio.

One of the top detractors to performance was an $3.3bn AUD aviation services company based in the U.S. The stock was down -4.5% in April. The fall in the share price is carried over from its results. It seems overdone as the previous month's results showed margins and profit, beating market expectations. We maintain our conviction in the stock.

Outlook

The US central bank remains cautious, with policy rates not expected to change until September 2025 as the timing of the resumption of this rate cutting cycle gets pushed out on tariff induced inflation concerns. The near term direction of markets remains highly reliant on the U.S. tariff newsflow and the timing and size the Trump administration's tax cut and deregulation agenda. For now while soft economic data recently (e.g. household and business sentiment/confidence data) has been poor, hard economic data such as growth, spending and unemployment data in the U.S. has, for now, remained robust.

Globally, monetary policy regimes were a mixed bag. Over the last month the Bank of Canada and Bank of Japan kept their rates flat, while the European Central Bank, Bank of England and RBA lowered their policy rates by 25 basis points. Due to the continued uncertainty of US government policy, recessions probabilities have fluctuated widely recently with Polymarket putting a US recession this year as high as a 66% probability earlier in May though that has reduced to 38% at writing.

We incrementally increased the defensiveness of the portfolio as we navigate this period of low forecasted economic growth both in the U.S. and globally. The portfolio remains balanced, comprising a mix of cyclical and defensive companies. We continue to focus on businesses with resilient earnings and believe the positioning is appropriate for current market conditions. Small-cap growth companies continue to offer attractive valuations compared to large caps, supporting our outlook for ongoing opportunities for the portfolio. We remain committed to our disciplined approach, identifying growing businesses with resilient earnings that we believe will ultimately find favour in the current lower growth market environment.

Investment Process

Ophir employs a fundamental, bottom-up research approach aimed at identifying businesses with the ability to meaningfully grow and compound earnings over time. Typically, the investment process will look to uncover businesses that are operating within, or about to enter, a period of structural growth and are generating cash or have a clearly identifiable pathway toward free cash flow generation. In order to identify these opportunities, the Ophir investment team spend a considerable amount of time understanding the quality of the business and the environment in which it operates.
